The "Common People Boat Camp" Mo arranged for Shuen has knocked the distance between them, and lately there's been a rather good atmosphere between them. Meanwhile, Shuen's little brother Hina suddenly gets close to Shuen! Their constant friendship makes Mo nervous, though.

"I love looking at the Saturday newspaper ad inserts ♡ For some reason they put in a million of those things, but lately the vast majority have been for "Houses with Porches." You can listen to the wind chimes and the voices of the cicadas on a hot summer day, and then you can pull down your screen and take a siesta. At night you can set off fireworks while eating watermelon. In the winter you can bask in the sun with a cat on your lap," says Ukyou Ayane-sensei, the font of knowledge.

Ukyou Ayane

Sweet Mie is a second-year high school student. She has a hospital-indulgent mother and a little brother with a monstrous outer complexion. Mie leads a happy life that she seems to be the only person that does... For the Otsuki family is extremely poor!

To alleviate her poverty Mie goes to work for the most influential family in the neighborhood, the Tsumas. The Tsumas, only one Otsuki is in the same grade as Mie and is a person of unsurpassable conduct at school. She is so popular that the other students call her "Prince Tsumu" but as for Mie, her is a complete opposite!

In Mie plays a "Common Purple Pearl Gamy" to seduce the Prince. After this, the distance between Mie and the Prince disappears and moreover she agrees to date him. For some reason, the little brother then shows up to try along on their date! Mie feels that she should be happy that she, who has always hated the Prince, has been getting along so intimately with him, but for some reason she's sudden closeness to him makes her uneasy...

This is volume 2 of Fairy Stream. Thank you for buying it.

I feel like the pace with
this work is a lot more relaxed than with my previous serializations.

I keep wanting to talk about this and that, but I end up just talking about myself every time.

I'll start volume 3 with a little bit of pain and lot of enthusiasm. Please keep reading it 'til the end.

Oh, yeah! There's an extra essay at the end of this volume. It's a continuation of

What I've Been Into Lately.

In the last volume, I wrote that my latest hobbies have been pro-wrestling and coddling in a little bit of gardening, but now I've really lets breeding koi-fish. I've got plenty of water bins grouped into a cluster, so I'm using some of that space to raise them. Both the koi-fish and the plants are getting a lot of good sunlight so they're very lively and healthy. The moment I started raising them, they began multiplying. I have no idea how many there will be... It's a little scary actually.

Oh, and one more thing I've been reading these five manga magazines lately. I've also been reading fairly equally from a bunch of different publishers, but a lot of authors overlap, so I end up buying the same thing twice by mistake. They may be a little racy for minors, but they all have very cheerful endings, so I keep them around to read when I'm down. I keep them right next to my massage chair.

On Editor Scenes.

For this volume, I wrote an extra manga, called "Yours  MACE", but the title logo was actually just a dress-up job I did on a design by one of my editors, Naoki! It's essentially a collage of items made by the Revolver Association (certainly special, though). The extra preview pages were made on my idea.

The cash for volumes 1 and 2 was made the same way (I don't know if volume 3 has a cash.) It was also designed by my editor, whose conflicting advice is something I'm always glad to get.

When I was making volume 2, my glasses were rebelling against me. I looked at it and said, "What the heck!" but you all bought it, anyway I thank you so much! That made my editors laugh.

On the Okinawa Fx Concert.

Well, this year I went to another Fx concert. I wasn't really far for it this time. All the way to Okinawa. I knew that the number of deaths was very limited, but I did everything I could and managed to get away.

However, the day of the concert, a typhoon hit. It was the "Extremely strong" Typhoon Number 11. This is actually what they called it.

My flight was forced around. The plane was shaking quite a bit, but somehow I thought we would make it. My little sister who was with me, was quite drunk. I while she hadn't been so intoxicated, but... she was.

The concert was very fun, but the reactions were frustrating. It wasn't for some good reasons, though. On the second day it did seem depressing. I went to "Pineapple Park in Okinawa" and bought some Ryukyu glass and T-shirts. The next day it flew home.

It was only a three day two night trip, but it was packed with events.

The pineapple I had

On My New Computer

I bought one.
The one I've had for years got slower and slower like it was
slowly dying inside.
This time I got a Dell
Dimension 4600.
I got a 1600 MB hard drive, with 4 GB of memory.
It runs really, really fast. However, I may have overdone it
with the 1600 MB
hard drive...
I almost fainted when I saw the bill.
I converted my old
machine to the
new one via LAN
(Thanks to Fokichi-kun),
and now I have a
new computer skill!

That's my big learning
curve.

Consequently, I ran some cleaning software on my old machine, and the speed and performance improved considerably. I had never even heard of registry cleaning
before...

There should be a limit to such ignorance...

...What is kind of weird.

When I say work, I don't mean the things I do, but the work that goes into it.

My next volume is going to be a compilation, so I changed the way I went about doing it.

I wonder how I should explain it. I've been able to complete my manuscript much more quickly. I had the notes to the editorial department in three days.

I used to fight all the time with my editors, but now we get along outstandingly. I'm happy I'm super-happy! I feel as though a burden has been lifted from my shoulders!

It's fun to be able to draw more quickly as well as reading things, but as of right now, that's just a dream.
